

BREAKING THE POVERTY CYCLE

All children have the right to be children, to be safe, to attend school, to play, to be treated with respect, to be heard, to be understood and to be loved.

All the profit from this bracelet will go directly to the education of 100 poor and helpless children in Vietnam, preventing them from being sent to live on the streets of Hanoi, simply because their families have no choice. Julie Sandlau will put these children through education with your help. Together we can give them hope for a better tomorrow.

“I had no doubt from the start! I had to make a difference and help these poor children in the streets of Hanoi. They are innocent souls caught in the poverty cycle that they have very little possibility to escape from on their own. With help from Choice Foundation and Blue Dragon Foundation I have got the chance to help 100 children to break out from this poverty cycle by giving them an opportunity for a brighter future through education. We have so much – they have nothing...”

There is a great need in Vietnam to help disadvantaged children breaking the poverty cycle. Many families can not afford to pay for their children’s school fees and therefore have to send their children to the cities to make money instead. Some end up as shoe polishers or beggars, others get trafficked far away from home by criminal gangs. The children end up surviving from day to day with the dangers that exist when living on the streets.
